I, Jean Baptist Chambard, master of the schooner Peggy of Nanje-moy, on Friday the 19th day of May, just before daylight, being at anchor a-breast FreeStone Point on the Virginia flats, was ran foul of by a large sloop coming to Alexandria, under the command of Alexander Bickerton, there being no person on board my vessel but a boy named Lindsay Lewis (son to a Mr. William Lewis, of Cone River,) and myself, and the boy being then asleep with his head lying on the bowsprit as a pillow, the bowsprit of the sloop ran over his head and broke his skull, which immediately terminated his existence. In corroboration of the above, the annexed deposition of the master of the sloop is published.

SIR,

I WAS running up the Potomac, on Friday the 19th inst. just at day break, and unfortunately ran foul of a small schooner, lying in the course at the time; my partner, Mr. Cooper, was at the helm, and myself below, putting on some thick clothes, being cool. I heard the vessel run foul of something, immediately running up found us with our bowsprit just over the schooner's bow; I ran forward and let go the halyards to deaden the vessel's way. I saw a man, as I thought, lying close up in the head of the vessel; I jumped on board the schooner, not seeing the man, as I thought, move to shove the vessel clear; there came a man out of the cabin and called his boy; he went forward and found him dead: from these circumstances it must have been our vessel that caused his death.

J. DYSON.

In the Virginia Gazette of the 28th ult. a writer of no common abilities, over the signature "Federalist," speaking of our most noble Secretary Gallatin, and the bank stock; draws in the following nervous manner, the character of that archi-political hero's conduct. Such a writer will always claim the public ear, and if always thus he seeks to expose to view the deformity of such pretenders as Gallatin, he must be well entitled to the gratitude of his country.

[Anti Demo.]

With respect to Albert Gallatin, I have weighed and analyzed him, and he is found wanting. Methinks I see him at this moment trembling and starting at every sound, dreading that the next sentence will say all that he fears. Have I not said enough? Do not his public deeds speak in thunder? Does not the innocent blood which was shed in the Pennsylvania riots speak terrors to his soul? Do not the bloody tracks of the humble honest militia men, who returned from the military tour shoeless, shirtless, moneyless, and friendless, nay destitute of every thing except misery, speak to his heart? This is a lost apostrophe. But if none of those things can affect his idolators, what shall be said for the 1,500,000 dollars which were lost, forever lost ingloriously, and ignominiously lost, in that most disgraceful and degrading project, in which his partizans did, indeed, in a considerable degree, "stop the wheels of the government."

Fellow citizen, whoever thou art, I ask you to read again, and as you read remember, that the Albert Gallatin, concerning whom I have said all this, is the secretary of the treasury of the United States. The same who lately sold the bank stock for 120,000 dollars less than his fellow citizens would have given. The same who tells you that the whole mercantile and other capital and credit of this extensive and flourishing country was not equal to so small an object.

The same who was secretary of the self organized meeting which opposed, and resolved to counteract, the operations of their lawful government.

The same, who opposed with vehemence and clamor a compensation for Mr. Wolcott as secretary of the treasury, which salary he now enjoys in his own person.

The same who brags about the overflowing treasury, about the resources of the country, but never gave a vote, or any other aid to produce one dollar into the treasury. (The sale of the bank stock, at less than its value excepted.)

The same who with unvarying steps, opposed every measure of the government, under the former administrations, which promised to contribute to public credit, national honor or safety.

Who is this that has dared to profane the temple of democracy, to drag the high priest of the order from the consecrated altar, and to expose him to the indignation and contempt of an injured and deluded people? Thousands of tongues have echoed and will re-echo this question. The partizans of the Grand Lama of democratic delusion are ready to break down the barriers of social right and order; they are ready to cry vengeance and destruction to him who has dared to lay prostrate at his feet, and to hold over their fallen Messiah, in one hand, a garland of triumph, in the other, a rod of correction, which have been decreed to him by the United voices of truth, reason, virtue and justice; who has scourged with severity, and who now ceases to exercise the irresistible superiority which he possesses, because he knows that enough has been said to convince and confirm the judgments of the candid; and because he knows also that the lazy, the ignorant, the obstinate, the factious, and the intriguing, have shut their eyes and ears against the most demonstrable truths; nor would they be convinced, though they were to be addressed, in the thunder of heaven, or from the tombs of those departed heroes and patriots, to whom America is indebted for her rank as a nation.

Oh, destructive, deluding, incorrigi-

* It now appears that the actual loss upon a moderate calculation was 152,000 dollars.

+ This appears by a copy of the resolution which has been frequently published, and which we should now republish if we had a copy.

ble blindness, and madness! But here I will stop, at least, for the present, lest I become frantic and delirious at the prospect. And why not stop? Have I not taken the bull by the horns? Have I not cast him upon his back? Have I not exposed him at the altar of truth, and arraigned him at the bar of public justice? Have I not bound him with cords, which are too strong for his strength, so that every Lilliputian who passes by may give him a blow?

The day approaches when it will be told in all the terms of irritation, that it was Gallatin whose conduct greatly contributed to the Pennsylvania insurrection, which deluded, and led the ignorant and misjudging people to these riotous and destructive deeds, which terminated in ruin, devastation, fire, and death; and robbed our treasury of about fifteen hundred thousand dollars.

It was Gallatin who raised an outcry against the salary of his predecessor; and yet has accepted and enjoys it himself, in all the pride and insolence of success.

It was Gallatin who countenanced that junto which made garbled extracts from the treasury books, for the purpose of destroying the confidence of the public in his virtuous predecessors.

It was Gallatin, who deluded the public into the belief, or countenanced the opinion, that the honest and meritorious Pickering, had defrauded them of more than half a million of dollars, at the very time when he knew that the whole was a deliberate and detestable falsehood.

It was Gallatin who has offered an insult and an open calumny upon the whole mercantile character, capital and credit of the merchants of this country, because it was the only alternative, by which he could offer an excuse, for one of the most indefensible public transactions, which ever did exist in the fiscal operations of any government, which either had resources or credit. I mean the secret sale, or rather sacrifice, of the bank stock, when there were, as he said, millions of idle dollars in the treasury.

Public Credit! Albert Gallatin, the father, the protector, the guardian of public credit! So say the disciples of this Messiah. Oh tell it not in Gath! Surely this cannot be the same Gallatin who tormented the Pennsylvania insurrection; who accepts, as a salary, what he said was too much for his predecessor; who calumniated the honest and upright, to make room for himself; whose motto and universal practice continued so long to be, to stop the wheels of the government, when the most illustrious of men, the father of his country, the great, the glorious, the immortal Washington, presided, directed and advised.

Yes, it is the same Gallatin, it is he who now prates about public credit; who has done his utmost to destroy every good and glorious principle of that government; who has left stains upon it, which ages will never obliterate; whose deeds will continue to tarnish the American character, until time, though memory, shall all sink, and be lost in eternal oblivious chaos, and even the great globe itself shall crumble into atoms, and leave not a wreck behind.

+ This junto, it is now said, consisted of Albert Gallatin, the secretary of the treasury, Wm. Duane, the Editor of the Aurora, John Beckley, the clerk of the house of representatives, Israel Israel, the Sheriff of Philadelphia, Campbell, then a Clerk in Mr. Wolcott's office, and now an officer in the army of the United States, the same army from which Captain Numiger and many more equally meritorious were dismissed. "We are all Republicans—we are all Federalists." If the perpetration of deeds so detestable, entitle the culprits to the honorable designation of republicans, I believe that a little more time will show that federalism and republicanism are too widely separated for union.

From the Charleston Courier.

IN a late number, we took occasion to lay before our readers some curious positions of Mr. Thomas Paine's, laid down in his letter to the people and armies of France, in defence of the government of Barras and his compeers. Positions which evidently struck at the principle on which the federal constitution is founded, and on which his worthy friend, Jefferson, holds his present office. His words are these—

"An individual by election is almost as bad as the hereditary system." It is curious enough to observe the ignorance, as a writer, of this man, who usurps to himself the office of guiding nations, measuring out constitutions, overturning governments, and leveling kings with cobblers, tinkers and even with such men as himself. He compares two things, in two different ranks and denominations of existence—that is, an individual with a system—just as if he should say a friar is as bad as the Mahomedan religion—or a staymaker as good as a revolution. But this is not all. When he comes to prove the perfection of the constitution he is applauding—a constitution, the executive part of which was composed of five members, he endeavors to shew that there is attached to the number five a peculiar excellence that sets it above all others; a kind of cabalistical virtue belonging to no other number in the numeration table. These are his words—

"Whenever an observation can be drawn from the economy of nature, it is worth attending to; and the more so as it has been customary to make comparisons between the body politic and the natural body. Follows then this idea, we see that nature, in the construction of the human frame, has acted by the number five.—There are nominally five senses. Had more been necessary, she would have given them. Each of the extremities also terminates in that number of fingers or toes, and we cannot conceive the usefulness or the want of more. It is also worthy observing that nature appears to have been studious in exploding individually or the number one. She has not committed the preservation of any of the senses to a single organ. Seeing and hearing, the two principal senses, have double organs; so also has taste—for smelling, though a different modification, is the forerunner of taste—and as to feeling, it exists in every part of the body. If it should be objected that smelling is absolute, by a distinct sense, and not a distinct modification, and that it has but one organ, the nostril, it may be remarked, that this sense is the most inferior, the least necessary, and the earliest dispensed with, of all the senses. If then we take nature for our guide in constructing a government, we must in the first place explode individually, or the number one, from all the upper works of government at least; and as plurality, we may as well follow her method as invent another. This is done in constituting a directory of five members, though it is most probable the idea of copying nature did not occur at the time. The reason why the two councils are numerous is not from the necessity of their being so, on account of business, but because that every part of the republic shall find and feel itself in the national representation."

It is really worth considering what the condition of that man's mind must be who could have recourse to such wretched trash. How utterly destitute of thought or argument his head must be, and how entirely deprived of common sense who could expect such abominable nonsense to be listened to with patience. Oh, great God! how visibly just are thy dispensations even here, for how disgraceful is the decline, and how deplorable will be the end of this wretched man!! Emphatically miserable must he be indeed, who finds himself cut off here from all for which he sacrificed his hopes of hereafter; and find himself shut out from all hopes of hereafter, by a life productive of nothing but pain, sorrow, misery, disappointment, and shame here.

We will close these few short observations, with a call on our reader's attention to a thing well worth the notice of all men, but particularly of those, who from negligence, vanity or vice, find in themselves a relaxation of religious faith.—Let them repent and be humble, when they see the idolator, and high priest of the religion of reason, after profaning, attacking and renouncing christianity on account of its miracles, all at once, for the purposes of base adulation, avowing his faith in the cabalistical virtue of certain numbers, and in occult analogies, with all the serious, self-important gravity of a fortune telling old gipsy, of a credulous old woman, swallowing a gypsies' or conjuror's tale. The next work of Mr. Paine, will perhaps be on the science of astrology, and his next previous lesson to mankind, how to consult fortunes in a horoscope, and to determine their fates by the configurations of the planets at their birth.

Arrived, schr. Fair American, captain Gummel, from sea, dismantled (being from this port to Cayenne,) in the Gulph Stream, in lat. 36, long. 73, on Friday the 27th May having experienced a heavy gale of wind from the N. E. and a tremendous sea, which made an incessant break over her, lying to under threereefed foresail; the sea swept away the bowsprit, and with it went both masts by the deck; suffered considerable damage in her hull by the wreck, but fortunately no lives were lost; the severity of the gale lasted about 24 hours. Finding that the vessel remained tight and made no more water than usual, after lying 3 days a hulk, got up a jury mast, and arrived in this bay on Wednesday last.

WASHINGTON, CITY, June 6.
Extract of a letter received at this place from Chillicothe dated May 23, 1803.
"Captain Herod who, lived about 15 miles from hence, had some dispute with an Indian, or Indians he was found on Friday last the 20th, about sundown, shot through the body and scalped near his house. When found he was not dead, and could only state before he did die that he received the injury from Indians.

The report at first was very alarming, we were informed that a large body of Indians well armed were in the neighborhood, and had killed several families.
This part of the report is not true. It appears entirely probable that not more than one or two Indians at most have done the injury, and that from personal revenge; several parties have been out for two days past in search of the murderer, and have not yet returned.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, June 3d.

BRIGADE ORDERS.

THE Court Martial, of which Major John P. Van Nels was President, ordered for the trial of Ensign PEYTON, on the charges exhibited against him by captains Lyno, Lyles, Scott, and Geiger, viz. That Ensign THOMAS WEST PEYTON of the first Battalion of the second Legion of the Militia of the District of Columbia, did in a late affair of honor, between himself and Mr. Joseph Mandeville, Jun. conduct himself in a manner unbecoming to the character, of an officer and a gentleman, by challenging the said Mandeville, and afterwards giving a certificate of his having made acnowledgements to the said Mandeville, as well as in other instances, having unanimously passed the following Sentence:

That the charges against Ensign Thomas West Peyton, are not supported by evidence, and he is, therefore, acquitted of them. Nevertheless, the court feel it to be their duty to exercise a censorial power, by declaring that the conduct of Ensign Peyton, in the quarrel mentioned in the exhibition of charges, evinced a want of caution and discretion, that deserves and receives the disapprobation of this court; the censure of this court is restrained to milder terms, than might otherwise be deemed appropriate, if they were not sensible that Ensign Peyton was betrayed by peculiarity of circumstances into embarrassments, the result of which, it is confidently hoped and expected by this court, will be no criterion of his character and future conduct, and may prove a monitory example to himself and other inexperienced young men. And the said sentence having been approved by the President of the United States, the Brigadier General hereby dissolves the court, and orders that Ensign Peyton be released from arrest.

The foregoing orders are published for the information of the officers of the Brigade.

By order of
Brig. Gen. JOHN MASON, JOSHUA WINGATE, jun. Brig.
Major, and Inspector of the Militia of the District of Columbia.

It has often been asserted, and always with truth, that a good and active democrat by profession, is in fact always a despotic tyrant, if ever an opportunity offers that he dare embrace. Search history throughout, and from the attempt of Satan to democratise Heaven, down to the reign of his active disciple Robespierre—these pretenders to equality and enemies to all representative and delegated power are all alike, at heart. Our democrats cover the cloven foot tolerably well at present, but the first good opportunity, they will not fail to rise to destroy our excellent constitution, formed to protect us from the cruel and unrelenting fangs of Democracy; and yet there is now and then a scribbling Demo, who will expose himself, in spite of the risk; for example, take the following passage from Littleton, No. 7, published in a Richmond paper, and in most of the democratic papers of the continent, repeated!

No. VII.
"The creature is dependent on the creator. The President creates officers, and thence has the attendant power of destroying them."

Here the reader will behold with astonishment what a simple, cringing, canting democrat would do if he could.

HE CAN CREATE AND HE DESTROY!!!
For my part I doubt, with all humility, whether this sentiment, unqualified as it is,
would not be insulting to Omnipotence himself, for I have been taught to believe of him, that he is governed by his mercy, that endures forever; indeed I know that "his tender mercies are over all his works."

Had Mr. Jefferson possessed firmness, or had he preferred his future fame to present considerations, whenever an impudent and ignorant pretender, in consequence of his adroitness at lying, on the election ground, had asked for his reward in an office, and turned out some war worn veteran, only to make room for him, Mr. Jefferson would have told this truth in substance if not in rhyme, in reply to such impertinence,—"You ought to reflect, Sir, That

CYPHERS, with figures mix'd, become Of use in making up a sum,
And well their places fill:

But he's with double dullness curst, Who e'er attempts to place them first,
For then they're nothing still.

The Invitation.

From whence, ah say, the lengthen'd sigh, Which slowly heaves my Lucy's breast?
And why the lucid, tearful eye,
That speaks her gentle heart oppress?

The flatt'ring tale can I believe?
For such it is, sweet girl, to me,
'Tis not in candor to deceive, Say are we, Lucy, dear to thee?

Enquiry cease! did not the tear, That tricked down thy lily cheek At our adieu, say we were dear, As plain as eloquence could speak?

And sure thy cheek as cold as clay,
The simplest mind could not mistake—
The hand which on thy bosom lay, Said too, that parting made it ach.

But of those feelings be aware,
And check them in their pliant spring;
So powerful now, they'll prove a snare, My Lucy's gentle heart unstring.

A long, a tedious winter past,
And oft we sigh'd, and spoke of thee;
This gloom, I said, won't always last,
In Spring, we shall our Lucy see.

So sure, ah me! that May would bring,
The little girl we hold so dear!
When, O behold! it's on the wing, And yet our Lucy is not here!

'Tis thus illusions oft betray,
The heart that's willing to believe—But why, my Lucy, this delay?
Do not our tender hopes deceive!

More fair would seem the woodbine bow'r, Wait thou dear girl, reclin'd beneath;
More sweet would bloom the jasmine flow'r, If wak'd to life by Lucy's breath.

The frolic Mirth, may not attend, How should she in our passive Vale?
Yet each will clasp their lovely friend,
And love maternal bid thee hail.

The Moniteur, adverting to the Convention settled by the British and Batavi-an troops at the Cape, contents itself with the following brief apostrophe.
"CAPITULATION IN TIME OF PEACE!!!"

In answer to this pithy exclamation, it may be said; In time of Peace France annexed Avignon to its own territories!

In time of Peace France compelled Ehrenbreitstein to capitulate!

In time of Peace France first invaded Switzerland!

In time of Peace France again invaded that offending country!

In time of Peace the King of Sardinia was obliged to give up Piedmont!

In time of Peace France obliged the Grand Duke of Tuscany to leave his country!

In time of Peace Bonaparte surprized Malta and conquered Egypt!

In time of Peace Spain was forced to relinquish Louisiana!

Savoy were attacked, conquered, and plundered!

Many other events of the same kind might be noticed among the hostile operations of France, in time of Peace, but these will suffice at present, as an answer to the emphatic apostrophe of that chronicle of historic truth, the Moniteur.

Valuable Property

One Tract of about 1,100 acres of land within six miles of Alexandria, on which are a good Grift Mill with two pair of stones in good order; a Distillery with three stills and a boiler, the house has lately been enlarged and put in complete order; a dwelling house with two rooms on the first and four on the second floor; an excellent ice-house, wall-house and kitchen, all almost new and in good order; a large barn and stable almost new; several out houses for the miller, distiller and work people; corn house, smoke house, spring house, and fowl's houses, and a very good garden. There are about 2500 fruit trees on the Land, all of the choicest fruits America can afford, and we will venture to say that there is not a better collection in Virginia; about sixty acres of the land are in meadow, and about 700 acres in woods, and most of it thickly timbered, particularly the bottom land, of which there are about 400 acres, exclusive of the meadow.

One other tract of land about 12 miles from Alexandria, and adjoining on the fourth side of Ravenworth, containing about 170 acres. This land is well situated for farming; there is a framed dwelling house on it, with two rooms on the first and two on the second floor.

One other Tract about five miles from Alexandria, near the turnpike road and the land of Mr. Charles Lee, occupied by Mr. Kendall, containing 80 acres and most of it in woods. The only improvement on this land is a pretty good log house.

Lots in Alexandria.

That Lot of Ground on which the bake house and dwelling house stand, at present occupied by Mr. Andrew Jamieson.

The Lot adjoining the bake house lot, on which the tobacco warehouse stand.

A large Lot opposite the tobacco warehouses, on which are two small framed dwelling houses and a carriage house.

A Lot on the north west corner of Queen and St. Asaph streets, containing 60 odd feet on Queen street and about 100 feet on St. Asaph street.

A Lot on the east side of Washington street, near Queen street, containing on Washington street 63 feet, and in depth 170 odd feet, with the benefit of an alley of 10 feet 6 inches, running the whole distance on the fourth side and east end of the lot.

Lands in the Western Country.

One Tract of 1,675 acres, one of 2,000 acres, and one of 5,000 acres in Kandolph, formerly Harrison county, Virginia, equal in quality to most of the lands in that county.
One tract in Kenhawa, formerly Montgomery county, on Mud river, containing about 5,000 acres; this land is about 40 miles below the mouth of Great Kenhawa, and about 6 miles from the Ohio river, is almost all bottom land and equal in quality to any land in that county, and navigable within two miles of the land.

One Tract of 400 acres on Copitalico creek, which empties into the Great Kenhawa, said to be very valuable.
